Magic of Land Ownership

The ownership of land tethers a man to law and order better than all the laws of the statute books. It breeds in him a sense of personal worth and family pride. It identities him with the community he lives in and gives him a proprietary interest in the church, the school, and other organizations and enterprises of his home town or home community. It enables him to hold his family together, makes him a better father, a better neighbor, and a better citizen, mainly because it makes him a stable, responsible member of society.—Dr. E. C. Branson.

Oakville

The Community League will meet March 2, 1927, at the school, 7:30 p. m. Mrs. W. C. Harvey has charge of the program which will be on "Home Improvement." Some prominent speakers are expected. This should interest everybody, come and learn how to improve your home.

The Excelsior Club, of Oakville High School is waking up. They have 16 wide awake members. They have $18.00 in treasury which was the result of a play given entitled "The Little Clodhopper." The new members have not had much work to do, they are glad to see the time come for them to get busy. The club meets March 3, 1927, at 3 p. m. We are expecting Mr. Hudgins to give a talk. We wish to congratulate Christine Martin, of this club, for winning the prize for being one of the two members of this county who had made the most improvement in club work during the last year. The prize was $2.50 given by Mr. Burger.

The Jefferson Literary Society will meet Feb. 25th, giving a Washington and Longfellow program.

The Government Class has just completed posters on "How Laws are Make." They will give a debate, Feb. 28th, Resolve that immigration to the United States should be entirely prohibited. The debators are Doris Barlow and Hubbard Moore, affirmative; Christine Martin and Florence Marks, Negtive.

The fifth grade is having a "Automobile Race" in arithmetic. The pupil who works the the most examples without help during the term wins the race.

Mrs. E. B. Martin who has been ill with pneumonia is rapidly recovering.

Clark Martin has also been on the sick list, but is much better.

Mr. T. R. Martin had his throat lanced twice, but doctor thinks it will get alright now

Mrs. Burkey, of Appomattox, has been substituting the past two weeks for Miss Mary Kennard, who has been at her home ill. She has returned, but sorry to say that she must give up the school on account of her mother's bad health.

Mrs. George Phelps who has had a bad spell of pneumonia is slowly improving.

The school children were rejoicing to have a visitor one day last week to take their pictures.

Misses Agnes Davidson, Edythe Martin, and Virginia Moore, spent the week-end in their homes.

OKANAGAN SERPENT VICTIM OF COLD

Monster's Death Struggles Watched by an Indian

Vancouver, B. C.—"Heaving, cracking ice, thrown up into mounds, near the shore of Okanagan lake, a few miles north of Kelowna, B. C.," says a dispatch from there, formed the basis of reports that "Ogopogo, mystery monster," died during the recent cold weather.

Peter Simon, half-breed Indian, according to the dispatch, said that while hunting along the shore he saw the ice "torn asunder by some monster's struggles and fragments thrown far up on the shore."

"Timidly venturing near," it continues, "Peter said he could see the giant form, sinuous and powerful, outlined beneath the ice, the tail feebly thrashing for freedom and the huge head, bearing a resemblance to a sheep, raised twice in the agony of its struggles.

From his vantage point behind a tree, Peter watched the final battle for life, saw the great form become more and more feeble, then subside, gently into the ice. Creeping to the lake shore he made certain the monster was dead, then, dropping his rifle, rushed frantically back to Kelowna."

This "Ogopogo," or sea serpent, gained much publicity for Okanagan Lake, B. C., when it was first reported as striking terror into the hearts of the native population last summer by its sudden appearance in their lake.

In appearance the "Ogopogo" is described as measuring 20 feet from the tip of its black-whiskered snout to the end of its scalp, serpent-like tail. It has a head like a sheep, a body like a boa constrictor, and two fins near the head similar to automobile tires in texture.

Franklin Lightning Rod Goes to Museum

New York.—The Museum of the Peaceful Arts, which is to be built in this city with a bequest of $2,500,000 made by the late Henry R. Towne, will have among its possessions, part of the lightning rod set up on St. Paul's cathedral, London, in 1770, on the advice of Benjamin Franklin.

The lightning rod recently was supplanted by one of modern make, and the authorities of the cathedral presented to the trustees of the museum a piece of the old one, ten and a half inches long and weighing nine and a half pounds. E. J. Bolwell, clerk of the works, St. Paul's cathedral, in a letter accompanying the gift, wrote:

"Lightning conductors did not seem to be in vogue at the time St. Paul's was completed, but somewhere about 1770 Benjamin Franklin was called in to advise on this matter. His system appeared to be that existing metal work between the ground level and the cross should simply be connected up by means of rod iron. The specimen piece which you have was taken from a position between the ball supporting the cross and the lead dome.

"A ring of rod was fixed around the lantern, inside, and various tappings were taken downward from this and passed through openings in the wall and then connected with the dome. The points of each length were halved together and bolted through."

"Old San Francisco 70," Lightship, is Scrapped

San Francisco.—"Old San Francisco 70," known by seafarers as the "ship that sails and sails and never goes anywhere," will soon complete her lightship service of 26 years in guiding craft through the Golden Gate.

Mariners on many seas will feel a twinge of sadness when the familiar old ship is replaced by a new one. Still sadder will be Capt. Thomas Jobson, master of the old lightship, who is known by seafarers as a skipper whose hobby is embroidering.

Radio beacons, a submarine bell and other modern aids to navigation will be included in the new ship's equipment.

Lumbermen Travel Home by Log, 30 Miles, on River

Kelso, Wash.—Cowlitz river log drivers are lost on the rolling deep but on a rolling log they are fixtures. Norman Pritchard and James Masters, marooned thirty miles upstream surveying timber, were in a hurry to reach here for the holidays. Available transportation was nil, so the two men rolled a ten-foot thick fir log into the roaring river, set up a camp stove, tent and table on its rough board top and floated home.

Horn Player Leaves Money for "Fanfare"

Amiens, France. — Seventy years of horn-blowing did not quiet the ardor of Nicholas Valery for brass music.

He began as a trumpeter at fifteen in the French army in 1857, two wars ago, and he was the leading horn tooter of the department for generations.

His will left 500 francs to the local "fanfare" society, but provided there be gay and brassy music at his funeral. He went to the cemetery to the tune of "Madelon" and "Wooden Trumpet."

FISHMONGER CLAIMS CARLOTTA'S FORTUNE

Says He Is Only Son of Late Mexican Rulers.

London.—A Billingsgate fishmonger, known to his fellows as William Brightwell, but who calls himself "His Imperial Highness, Archduke Maximilian of Austria," is making plans to claim a share of the fortune left by the late Empress Carlotta.

"Prince Bill," as his neighbors have dubbed him, claims he is the only son of Maximilian and Carlotta. He says he was born in Rome, December 8, 1867, and was brought to England by a "mysterious, sorrowful woman in black," who left him in care of a priest.

The fish peddler says the mysterious woman later disclosed his real identity and that his story has been confirmed by Archduke Johann of Tuscany.

Empress Carlotta's fortune, which consists of government bonds, in addition to extensive landed estates, has not been accurately estimated, but it is believed that an inventory will show it to be large.

The heirs include King Albert of Belgium, Albert's sisters, the duchess of Vendome and Princess Josephine of Hohenzollern, Charlotte's sisters, Princess Lonyay and Princess Napoleon and Charlotte's niece, the duchess of Schleswig-Holstein.

Old-Timer, 100, Eats Cucumbers, Smokes

Kansas City, Mo.—Eating cucumbers and green corn need not keep one from living 100 years.

"Uncle" Jeb Newton of Springfield, Mo., who passed his one hundredth birthday June 26, would rather eat cucumbers than anything else, unless there is green corn and a good brown pork roast on the table. When he arrived at the Hotel Baltimore Uncle Jeb said the muddy roads between Kansas City and Springfield made him a little stiff, but he thought a dinner and a night's sleep would "fix me all right." He said he stood the motor car trip with his youngest son, Dwight E. Newton, forty-nine years old of Springfield, "pretty well for a young fellow."

Uncle Joe turned back the years looking for a reason to which he might attribute his long life.

"It may have been my regular habits," he said laughingly. "I smoke from the time I get up in the morning until I go to bed at night. I also drink coffee with three meals a day and I feel pretty pert."

$5,947,729 Expended on False Teeth in One Year

Washington.—False teeth and tin cans form more than a rattling link in the nation's industrial chain. Take it from the Commerce department, they are not slipping either as the years roll by.

Figures hot off the census bureau griddle showed production of dental goods, including false teeth, filling, crown and bridgework, to have been worth $35,922,871 in 1925, an increase of 21 per cent over 1923. False teeth alone were valued at $5,947,729.

Evidently going to factory sources instead of back alleys for their tin-can statistics, the tabulators found 221 plants turned out $235,736,120 worth of tin cans and packages in 1925. Other tin products, including milk and ice cream cans, brought the total up to $260,359,961, an increase of 20.6 per cent compared with 1923.

Close Shop That Sold Washington Castor Oil

Fredericksburg, Va.—Young George Washington—he of the cherry tree fame—probably would be a happy youngster were he here today. The drug store where his mother purchased castor oil for him is closed.

What may be the oldest apothecary shop in the United States was opened here by Hugh Mercer. The Washingtons lived nearby. Mary Washington, like most mothers of her day, was a firm believer in castor oil as a cure-all for what ails you.

When George grew up, however, he evidently forgot the physician's concoctions, for it was at Washington's request that Mercer was chosen by congress as a brigadier general in the Continental army.

Marriages Are Few in Italian Switzerland

Milan.—No wedding bells have rung for a year in forty-eight communes of Italian Switzerland. In 1925, not a single birth took place in thirteen of the 260 communes of the Ticino canton. In more than sixty communes, the deaths exceeded the births, while in twenty-six communes, births and deaths just equaled each other.

The reluctance to marry and the dwindling birth rate among the Italian stock of the Swiss population offer a striking contrast with the conditions prevailing among their Latin brothers south of the Alps.

In Italy, government laws against birth control propaganda and taxes on bachelors have been enforced to aid what would seem to be a campaign for more Italians.

STATIC MAY PROVE STORM WARNING AID

State of Atmosphere and Currents Seen Related.

Washington.—Static, the bane of the radio fan who wants to get distant stations, may prove a valuable warning of such storms as the disastrous hurricane which struck Miami last September, according to a study made by the hydrographic office of the United States navy.

Beginning in March, 1924, the U. S. S. Kittery was used in a study of the value of weather maps in navigation. Before the experiments had been under way very long it was noticed that there was a very definite relation between the state of the atmosphere, as recorded in the data for weather maps broadcast from the naval radio station at Arlington, and the static. Later, when the weather maps were broadcast and received by means of the machine invented by C. Francis Jenkins, where a duplicate of the transmitted map is automatically drawn on the ship, it was found that the receiver could be used to record static.

The Jenkins machine is used in connection with a radio compass. The latter device is equipped with a loop antenna so that signals may be recorded from one definite direction. As the loop is rotated, and peals of static in any direction are detected by the receiver, corresponding ink lines are drawn on the paper-covered revolving drum of the Jenkins machine. In the time that it takes the recording pen to travel from one end of the drum to the other the loop is turned through a complete circle, so that the paper gives a graphic picture of the static in any direction from the observer.

Ship in Path of Storm.

The Kittery was fortunate enough, from the scientific viewpoint, to be in the path of the Miami hurricane of September, which was preceded by another hurricane that swept over Bermuda. On September 14, when the Kittery was east of Nassau, the Bermuda hurricane was a few hundred miles to the northeast and the Miami hurricane was approaching St. Thomas. The maximum of static was from a direction between these two storms. As the ship sailed south, and the Miami storm came nearer, while the Bermuda one went out of range, the static in the direction of the former became more intense. Finally, on September 16, after the Kittery had reached Cape Haitien, at the northwest tip of Haiti, and had made necessary preparations for rough weather, the ship and the storm met. The static was terrific in all directions.

By September 18 the Kittery was at Guantanamo, Cuba, and the storm was 600 miles distant, having crossed the Florida peninsula. There was relatively little static, except in the direction of the storm. Following the low pressure area of the hurricane, came one of high pressure, and on the morning of September 24, when the Kittery was near St. Thomas, no static whatever was recorded, the only time during the entire month that such a condition prevailed. Then, as the vessel started to sail northwest again, toward Cape Hatteras, another disturbance began to develop near Grand Turk island, and maximum static was recorded in its direction.

Hurricanes Develop Slowly.

Such hurricanes as the Miami one develop in the doldrums of the Atlantic ocean, off Cape Verde, the western tip of Africa, several weeks before they hit the United States. The Miami hurricane, for example, began about September 5, though it did not reach Florida until the 18th. It is suggested that a group of radio compass stations, located, perhaps, at San Juan, P. R., a point in the Barbados, and Trinidad, would be able to detect these storms as they approach. With three stations, where the lines from each cross would be the center of the storm, so that its position could be accurately plotted and sufficient

The bureau of engineering of the Navy department is now working on a further attachment for the recording device which will record the intensity of the static in each direction, with which, it is expected still more reliable results may be obtained. An interesting fact learned in the data already obtained, however, with regard to the intensity of the static, is that it is much weaker than signals from powerful transmitting stations.

Miss Caroline Hardy, who lives in the lower end of the county, has just returned home after completing her course at the College of William and Mary. She has completed work for her degree and will return in June to receive it.

The W. M. S. of Salem, will have a Geo. Washington social at Spout Spring school house, Feb. 26, commencing at 7 o'clock, p. m. Refreshments and entertainment free, all they ask is a half penny for every inch you are tall. A pretty girl will measure you on the wall.

Mrs. C. F. James entertained the U. D. C. at her home here Friday evening in a most elaborate way. The house was decorated with apple blossoms, punch and an ice course was served. Contest for prizes were awarded winners. A large attendance of members and guests were present, Lynchburg Implement Co., Lynchburg, announces in this issue the personel of the concern. Mr. L. E. Wingfield succeeds Mr. H. B. Scruggs as active manager of the company and his long and favorable intercourse with the people of this section will be good news. His concern is one of the old established houses of Lynchburg and carries a great stock of goods such as the farmer demands.

At a meeting of the Board of Supervisors of Buckingham County this month, the board passed a resolution requesting the representatives in the Legislature to authorize the county to issue $69,000 to liquidate an indebtedness against the county on account of school fund. We regret very much to see our Mother County issuing bonds, but we are informed that the condition of the school funds demand some re-adjusting.

The negro teachers of Appomattox County held an all-day meeting Friday at their school near Spout Springs. State Supervisor Gresham of Richmond made the principal address. The county school board was present. The negro schools were reported in good condition and of the 1,200 negroe children of school age, it was pointed out that the average attendance, in some instances, exceed that of the white attendance.

CARD PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Sears delightfully entertained a few friends last Tuesday evening at a Washington Birthday party. The evening was most enjoyably spent in a progressive card game. Appropriate and attractive score cards and favors were presented each guest. Miss Jessalyn Hancock and Kenneth Moore won high scores, attractive prizes were awarded each, after which a delicious salad course was served by hostess assisted by her son, and Mrs. Walter Scott. Those present were: Mesdames W. F. Woolfolk, Walter Scott, and John Scott. Misses Jessalyn Hancock, Verta Smith, Flora Lawson, Elaine McDearmon, Elva Stratton, Emily and Nell Harvey. Messrs. Harold Spencer, Oscar Cole, Joel Flood, Paul Drinkard. Ned Hancock, R. W. Wilkins, H. B. Martin, W. F. Woolfolk, Kenneth Moore, Reggie Stanley, and Walter Scott.

Chamber of Commerce

At a meeting of the chamber held on the 14th instant Mr. Blair, of the Electric Light and Power Co., addressed the meeting on the subject of rates in Appomattox and expressed a desire to lower them but regretted that such was not possible till the transmission high power lines could be connected with Appomattox, the time of which he did not know. Resolutions were adopted declaring that the rate at present was too high and a committee consisting of S. L. Ferguson, A. R. Harwood and R. L. Burke was appointed to take the matter up with the company for adjustment.

A resolution was adopted asking the Norfolk and Western Railway Company to erect gates and suitable safety appliances at the west end of town which point was declared a dangerous crossing. The chamber also took action looking to further industrial development in the the town, and approved a campaign to secure a larger membership for the chamber.

R. B. Hudgins, county agent, has designated S. L. Ferguson, A. H. Clement and L. Crawley to represent Appomattox at the conference in Lynchburg on February 24, when representatives from ten of the adjoining counties will convene three under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce to discuss the dark tobacco situation in this section.
